Hello,

I'm adding this patch which changes the "!!" double exclamation marks in lib/irb.rb to use single exclamation marks "!", I think using single exclamation marks are more formal for outputs and Ruby itself.

The patch in question was patched from: http://github.com/ruby/ruby -- Please let me know if you want me to patch from SVN trunk instead.

Thanks and Best Regards,

Diego

Although your claim is reasonable, we don't want to introduce any incompatibility right now. So we will merge the patch on trunk, for sometime in the future.

Why isn't this change included in Ruby 1.9.2 RC1?

    Why isn't this change included in Ruby 1.9.2 RC1?

It was committed after the code freeze. See http://redmine.ruby-lang.org/wiki/ruby-19/ReleasePlan . :-)

I see. Is there any chance it will be merged in future versions?

Thanks,

Diego

Certain. :-) It's been merged into trunk now, so the next release branched from trunk will have your patch applied. In addition, people who run bleeding-edge Ruby, i.e. build from trunk themselves, already have your patch. :-)
